Love is risky isn't it?

You put yourself out there and in doing so you give the other person the power to say yes or no...

You extend yourself...

You take the first step...but the reality is, they could turn around and walk the other direction.

Your invitation may not be returned. Your offer not accepted. Your love not reciprocated.

That's just the way it is. Love is flat out risky.

And this is true of first time meet and greets to asking someone out on a date to kneeling down and asking her hand in marriage...

Love is just risky.

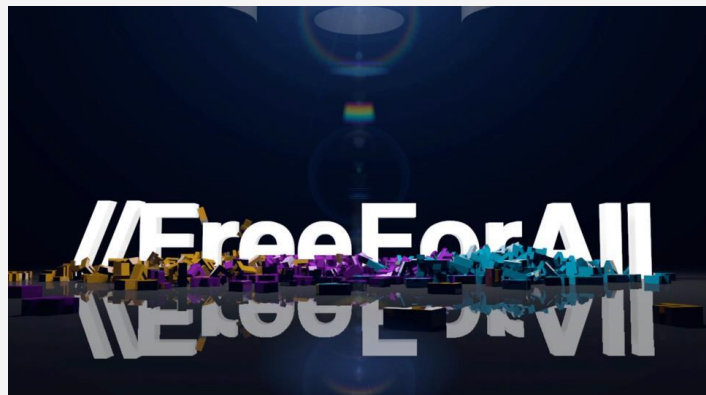

So is it worth it? If you're just going to get turned down again and again and again, is it really worth all that work?

And maybe a better question is where does God fit in to all this? How does He feel when we hurt? Where is He amidst our pain and heartbreak?

Join us THIS Sabbath at The Sanctuary and find out how love and risk and taking that terrifying first step all fits in to how we relate with God...

It's all there and it's brilliant. Hope to see you tomorrow morning!

In His grip,
Pastor Garrett
